

CENTRE FOR THE STUDY OF NEW LITERACIES
ANNUAL CONFERENCE
8TH - 9TH JULY 2011

NEW METHODS FOR NEW LITERACIES

The Centre for the Study of New Literacies, based in the School of Education in the University of Sheffield is a multidisciplinary research centre with a focus on literacy in everyday life, online and off line literacies, digital literacy practices, and literacy and popular culture. The focus of the annual conference is on research methodologies that can help us make sense of new literacies. We would like to invite papers on the themes of, for example, visual methodologies, participatory methodologies, multimodal analysis, narrative and ecological approaches to new literacies.

We are interested in papers from established and new researchers in the field. We invite potential presenters to send us an abstract of not more than 250 words to newliteracies@sheffield.ac.uk by the end of April 2011

date

8TH - 9TH JULY 2011

THE SCHOOL OF EDUCATION
388 GLOSSOP ROAD S10 2JA

The Centre for the Study of
New Literacies

Call for papers

The Centre for the Study of New Literacies

*at
The University of Sheffield*

Co-directors: Julia Davies and Kate Pahl

Annual Conference 8th - 9th July 2011

New Methods for New Literacies

The Centre for the Study of New Literacies, based in the School of Education in the University of Sheffield is a multidisciplinary research centre with a focus on literacy in everyday life, online and off line literacies, digital literacy practices, and literacy and popular culture.

The focus of the annual conference is on research methodologies that can help us make sense of new literacies. We would like to invite papers on the themes of, for example, visual methodologies, participatory methodologies, multimodal analysis, narrative and ecological approaches to new literacies.

The conference will include keynote speakers from national and international contexts and will be held at the Department of Educational Studies, University of Sheffield including:

David Barton, Lancaster University, UK,

Deborah Bullivant, Inspire Rotherham, UK,

Angela Creese, University of Birmingham, UK,

Margaret Mackey, University of Alberta, Canada,

Christopher Walsh, Open University, UK,

Bronwyn Williams, University of Louisville, US.

We are interested in papers from established and new researchers in the field.

We invite potential presenters to send us an abstract of not more than 250 words to newliteracies@sheffield.ac.uk by the end of April 2011.

